For $2.75 I bought a dictionary edited under new principles. It is the Thorndyke Barnhart Comprehensive Desk Dictionary (Double-Decker).

From the 600,000 words included in Webster's unabridged, the editor of this book of 996 pages chose 100,000 for entry. These words are said to cover 99% of the vocabulary of the English. A college graduate may recognize 50,000 words. The average American has a vocabulary of 8,000 and uses only about 1,000 in a normal day's conversation. These thousand include the, and, a, to, of, I, was, that, it, which, are the most commonly used words.

What makes this new dictionary revolutionary is its approach to definition. The older dictionaries define words historically, often using a synonym or phrase more obscure and confusing than the word defined.

Of "dagger" the book says: "A small weapon with a short, pointed blade, used for stabbing."

In a note about "don't" it says: "Don't is universally used in conversation and often in informal writing when do not would seem more emphatic or when rhythm seems more comfortable with the shorter form. In substantial usage don't equals doesn't, and the usage often finds its way into familiar speech, and even into casual writing; he don't look as well as he used to. Educated speakers and writers avoid it."

Reviewers quickly turned to see what the editors had to say about "drunk," after defining the word as "overcome with alcoholic liquor," this note was added: "DRUNK, it seems to take courage to use this natural word. We either go formal—intoxicated; or grasp at respectability through euphemisms—under the influence of liquor or indulged to excess; or make a weak attempt at humor with one of the dozen slang phrases like get plastered. But drunk is the word."

Although it's been repeated a million times, the comment of Dr. Samuel Johnson, compiler of the first dictionary of the English language, is still amusing. A sweet old lady complimented the learned lexicographer on the omission of vulgar words from his tome. "Thank you, madam," said Johnson. "I see you've been looking them up."

Referring back to "drunk," the young woman who typed this article tells us that she once went with a friend to a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous. As members related their experiences, she noted that when a confessor used a polite synonym for intoxication, he was reprimanded and reminded that he meant "drunk," didn't he?

Nearly 1000 Die Violently in State

Little Rock Jan. 11 (AP)—Nearly 1,000 persons died violently in Arkansas during 1951.

The Associated Press' unofficial violent death record shows 991 fatalities. This includes 430 deaths in traffic mishaps.

At least 11 persons died in hunting accidents during the year, and eight from heat prostration. Fire claimed 99 lives and about 96 persons drowned.

There were 347 miscellaneous deaths. These included homicides and suicides, and persons who died in plane crashes, railroad crossing accidents, and farm, home and industrial accidents.

Ten Die Violently in Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Ten persons have died violently in Arkansas since Monday. Seven of the victims perished in fires.

Two Negro children, Joyce Hudson, 3, and her 8-month-old brother, Butch, died when fire destroyed a house at Wilson, Ark., Thursday. They were the children of Mrs. Bobby Jean Hudson.

Ike Should Quit Army If He Plans to Run--Aiken

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.) said today that "if Gen. Eisenhower wants to be President he should ask to be relieved of his present job and make his views on domestic issues known."

"He should come out swinging and not be so coy," Aiken said, adding "and I'm from an Eisenhower area."

Aiken's comments attracted attention here because he long has battled what he calls "The Old Guard" in the Republican party.

Aiken's proposal followed President Truman's news conference statement yesterday that he will keep Eisenhower as Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in Europe as long as the general will stay.

Mr. Truman, after repeating his previous praise of Eisenhower, said the general would have to resign if he wins the Republican nomination.

"I think he better resign if he wants to win the nomination," Aiken told a reporter. "He would greatly strengthen himself as a candidate if he lets voters know where he stands."

Mr. Truman's news conference comment that he had been told last August the general was a Democrat received quick verification from Kansas.

The President, indicating the announcement that Eisenhower is a Republican came as news to him, said a brother of a former Kansas governor told him the general was a Democratic precinct worker at the age of 18.

In Olathe, Kas., Frank Hodges, brother of the late Gov. George H. Hodges, said Eisenhower as a young man made a speech at a Young Men's Democratic club banquet in Abilene, Kas. Hodges said he told Mr. Truman about it in a letter.

Many supporters of Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) for the GOP nomination have said that Eisenhower should take off his uniform and get into the primary contests.

Aiken, who has not yet joined other New Englanders in boomerang Eisenhower, said the "voters are entitled to know Ike's views."

"He certainly can't differ too much with administration foreign policies because he's been carrying out part of them," Aiken said, adding:

"I want to know, for instance, where he stands on the St. Lawrence seaway. I also wonder about his views on labor, health, education and farm programs."

"We don't want a President as coy as he's being as a candidate," Aiken added.

President Truman reported yesterday his hope that the Republican will nominate Sen. Taft. Taft had no comment on this today although it was recalled that he once observed the hopes President Truman would be the Democratic nominee.

Mr. Truman put off questions again about his own intentions but said reporters would know his plans before the Republican convention begins on July 7.

Sen. Lodge (R-Mass.), who has been sparing the Eisenhower campaign, made public yesterday a strong endorsement of the general by Republican Governor Payne of Maine.

And in Texas, R. P. Wall, Dallas Republican, launched a drive to get 25,000 signatures urging the nomination of Eisenhower. He said several hundred persons signed within a few hours after the petitions were released.

Woodbridge, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP)—The matronly looking wife of Capt. Kurt Carlson, overjoyed at her husband's rescue but exhausted from her tense vigil, says she never doubted that the valiant skipper "would come back to us all right."

Her anxious prayers had been answered, Mrs. Agnes Carlson said yesterday. "But I can't take any more."

Choked up with emotion when she received the first word of the rescue, Mrs. Carlson only could sob out that she was happy.

After she regained her composure, she talked to the family minister and said:

"I prayed that this would happen and the children prayed and we knew that our prayers would be answered. We always felt daddy would come back to us all right."

Mrs. Carlson is in seclusion at a relative's home where she has been ill.

In her 30's and the mother of two children, Mrs. Carlson has been under a doctor's care and for the past few days was not allowed to listen to the radio or read newspaper reports because of her condition.

Demonstration Clubs to Plan Membership Drive

Five Hempstead County Home Demonstration Club members will attend a district meeting at Hope, Jan. 24 to plan the 1952 Home Demonstration Council membership campaign. State-wide goal is 32,000 for '52.

Those representing the Hempstead County Home Demonstration Clubs will be: Mrs. Monroe Stuart, Route 1, Ozan, Council President; Mrs. H. E. Patterson, 615 South Pine, Council Vice-president; Mrs. E. H. Byers, Route 1, Hope, Council Secretary-Treasurer; Mrs. John Keck, Route 4, Hope, Council Reporter; Mrs. J. E. McWilliams, Route 4, Hope, Co-Chairman Membership Committee; and Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent.

Last year Hempstead County's quota was 500. Present membership in the county home demonstration clubs is 400. State membership stands at 45,947 in 1,781 clubs.

Hempstead county's goal for this year will be set at the district meeting.

The meeting has been planned so that Home Demonstration Council Officers, County Home Demonstration membership committees and Home Demonstration Agents may get together to plan and share ideas and experiences on getting new Home Demonstration Club members.

The group will meet in the court room of the county courthouse. The meeting will get underway at 10 a.m. and adjourn at 3 p.m. Miss Dorothy Price, District Home Demonstration Agent will be in charge of the meeting.

Disarmament Committee Voted by UN

Paris Jan. 11 (AP)—The United Nations General Assembly voted 42 to 5 today to set up a 12-nation disarmament commission. The body will study step-by-step reductions in arms and armed forces, culminating at some future date with prohibition of atomic weapons.

The western Big Three powers—the U. S., Britain and France—sponsored the measure, the major achievement of the sixth U.N. Assembly here.

Four weeks of debate in the Assembly's political committee—including private Big Four talks with Russia and Assembly President Luis Padilla Nervo for one week in an attempt to reach understanding—preceded today's decision.

At the outset of today's session, Russia withdrew amendments it had previously attempted in vain to get adopted in the political committee which would have demanded immediate prohibition of atomic weapons.

The Assembly voted down Czechoslovak attempts to emasculate the Western power resolution, especially on the step-by-step procedures. Avoidance of a fight over the Russian proposals speeded up the Assembly action.

The proposal calls for the 11 nations making up the Security Council, plus Canada, to study all disarmament proposals beginning within 30 days and to submit its first report by June, 1952.

West Memphis, Jan. 11 (AP)—Robert J. Boileau, executive vice president of Dixie Downs, Inc., says he is instructing his attorneys to file a 7.5 million dollar damage suit charging slander, libel and defamation of character.

Boileau said those who would be named as defendants include the Gazette Publishing Co., The Arkansas Gazette and its editors, J. N. Heiskell, of Little Rock; The Memphis (Tenn.) Publishing Co.; The Memphis Commercial Appeal and its editors, Frank Ahlgren; Radio Stations MC, WMCFM and MT, all of Memphis; and the Anti-Race Track League of Crittenden county and its officers.

Individual action, Boileau said yesterday, would be filed against Ahlgren, the Rev. Russell J. Glubb, West Memphis Baptist minister; Gov. Sid McMath and Dean R. Murray, retiring Arkansas Revenue commissioner.

Boileau said the action would be filed in federal and state courts. The Commercial Appeal and the Arkansas Gazette declined comment. Neither McMath nor Murray could be reached.

Boileau is the prime mover in the proposal to establish a horse race track here, across the Mississippi river from Memphis.

Crittenden county residents will vote on the proposed track Jan. 22. The Arkansas Racing Commission has granted a franchise to Dixie Downs, subject to approval at a local option election. However, the commission is scheduled to meet Jan. 16 to reconsider the franchise request.

Take a Look at Congress for Example of a 'Poor Boy' Who Now Makes Nation's Laws

By ED CREAUGH (For Hal Boyle)

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—So you know a thing or two about Congress. Then tell us:

(1) Which members of the present Congress have nine children apiece?

(2) How many members were born outside the United States?

(3) Which congressman has made a hole-in-one once, but twice?

(4) What congressman's wife has "Pocahontas" for a middle name? You can find the answers to these and heaven knows how many other questions about your lawmakers in the new, 737-page edition of the Congressional Directory, now being distributed.

In case you can't wait, here are the official answers to the questions above:

(1) Reps. Rabaut (D-Mich.) and Kelley (D-Pa.) are the most profligate parents. Rabaut has three sons and six daughters. Kelley has three daughters and six sons. No wonder there are so many Democrats around.

(2) Nine members were born outside the U. S., including Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. (D-N.Y.) who first saw the light of day at his folks' summer place in New Brunswick, Canada.

(3) The golfing congressman who has made a hole-in-one twice is Rep. McMullen (D-Fla.)

(4) "Pocahontas" is the middle name of Mrs. Thomas Baines Stanley (D-Va.). Her maiden name was Anne Pocahontas Bassett.

This barely scratches the surface of the no-doubt fascinating facts that can be dug out of the blue-covered directory.

Did you know, for instance, that Rep. Hike (Mansfield) (D-Mont.) never went to high school—but became a history professor at Montana State University?

Or that Rep. Hogarty (D-Ela.) by his own account, is the "only" person ever arrested in any Federal speaking country for filing an affidavit of prejudice against a judge?

Or that Rep. Ogarty (D-R.I.) is president of Bricklayers Union No. 1 in his native state?

There's inspiration to be found, too, in the new directory. You may think the time is past when a poor boy can grow up to make this country's laws—until you learn that Senator Hoey (D-NC) started out as a printer's devil. Senator McFarland (D-Ariz.) was a grocery clerk. Senator Flannery (R-Vt.) was a machinist's apprentice, and Rep. Irving, a Democrat from President Truman's home town of Independence, Mo., was a railroad call boy at the age of 13.

Without the directory, you might

McMath Screams Politics, Hits at Ike Murry

Little Rock, Jan. 11 (AP)—Gov. McMath and Atty. Gen. Ike Murry, who've been sparring verbally for several months, may have set the stage for Arkansas' 1952 political battle.

McMath landed the first punch yesterday when he called in members of the Arkansas Highway Audit Commission to ask that cross examination of witnesses at the commission's for the coming public hearings be allowed.

The governor who is thought to be considering running for a third term, opened his appeal with a blistering attack on Murry. And he charged that the audit hearings, opening here Jan. 16, had "degenerated into a political witch hunt."

McMath accused the attorney general of injecting himself "into this audit investigation in an effort to use the power of this commission to further his political aims and to protect the interest of those he serves."

Murry who hasn't said so but has indicated he'll enter the race for governor, wasn't present for the conference. But he answered, McMath's charges in a statement which said in part:

"The governor knows more about how the Audit department has been operated during the past three years than anyone else. He undoubtedly knows a great many of the facts which will be brought out by the investigation."

"Therefore it is not surprising that he is crying politics even before the public has been acquainted with the facts. After the audit has been completed, I am willing to let the public decide whether the revelations are based on politics."

"The semi-personal attacks that the governor has made reflect the strain under which he has recently been laboring."

McMath's accusations were made in a lengthy prepared statement he read to Audit Commission Chairman R. H. Dickenson of Morrilton, Vice Chairman J. H. (Jim) Crain of Wilson, who also is vice chairman of the Arkansas Highway Commission, and member W. S. Fox of Pine Bluff. Also present were Cooper Jacobway, attorney hired by the commission to assist in the investigations, and P. G. Wilson, the chief auditor for the St. Louis firm conducting the actual audit of the Highway Department.

The governor charged:

1. Atty. Gen. Murry was a "spokesman" for the Oil Dealers Association of Arkansas.

2. The big oil dealers of Arkansas had "entered into a price fixing agreement which is in direct violation of the anti-trust laws of this state."

3. The big oil dealers had blocked his effort to increase the state gasoline tax in 1947 but later "entered into a price fixing agreement" to increase the retail price of gasoline.

4. He (McMath) has "been investigated by every investigative agency that my political enemies could dominate."

5. Murry "is familiar with all these investigations and x x x has aided and participated in them all."

The governor called attention to the road building program that has been undertaken since he took office in January, 1949. He produced a map of the state to show the commission members where the work has been going on.

Then McMath charged that Murry had failed to investigate the alleged antitrust law violations by the oil dealers.

Murry answered that accusation with this statement:

"I have already looked into the matter concerning the alleged conspiracy of the oil dealers. The governor also requested U. S. Atty. Gen. Howard McGrath to investigate the alleged conspiracy. So far neither the Justice Department nor my department has been able to substantiate the governor's charges."

IAC Chairman Dickenson told McMath that, while the commission would not permit cross examination of witnesses, Highway Department attorneys would be permitted to ask questions at the hearings.

But said Dickenson, the questions will be asked by the presiding officer at the hearings and not by attorneys.

The commission was created by the 1951 legislature to investigate activities of the Highway Department from Jan. 1, 1947, to Jan. 1, 1952.

The hearings are being held to questioning witnesses in connection with information obtained in the audits.

Fayetteville Still Having Mayor Trouble

Fayetteville, Jan. 11 (AP)—A Washington County Circuit Court hearing opened here today to decide who will be mayor of Fayetteville for the next two years.

Mayor Powell Rhea is attempting to prove that he was elected to a second term in last November's municipal general election.

Rhea, unopposed Democratic nominee for the post, was defeated by written candidate Arthur B. Davidson, a former Washington county sheriff.

Rhea received 83 votes; Davidson, an automobile salesman, received 81.

Mayor Rhea took the case to court and Circuit Judge Maupin Cummings ordered the commission to certify Rhea as the winner on the ground that Davidson's supporters wrote his name three different ways thus splitting the total vote four ways: Rhea and three Davidsons.

Davidson appealed to the Arkansas Supreme Court which in turn sent the matter back to the lower court with instructions to determine:

1. Who would benefit from the votes cast for three Davidsons?

2. If any illegal votes had been cast, and

3. Whether write in votes are legal in Arkansas.

Most of today's session was to be taken up in questioning as many of Davidson's supporters as could be found to say whom they had intended to vote for.

Bomb Ruins Home of Vice Crusader

By REX THOMAS

Phoenix City, Ala., Jan. 11 (AP)—A hurriedly summoned grand jury was called today to investigate the bomb explosion that wrecked the home of a vice crusader who helped clean up this once rowdy playground of gamblers.

Circuit Judge J. B. Hicks directed the jurors to meet at 10 a. m. (EST), less than 60 hours after a dynamite charge ripped apart Hugh Bentley's residence on the outskirts of Phoenix City before dawn Wednesday.

Bentley, 42-year-old sporting goods dealer, was away from home when the blast shattered the five room frame dwelling, but his wife, two sons and nephew were asleep in the house. They escaped serious injury.

Even before the grand jury went to work, Judge Hicks spoke bitterly of the incident.

"Human habitation is too sacred to be treated in that manner," he told The Associated Press. "This court wants a full investigation and whoever is to blame brought to justice—whether high or low, rich or poor."

Solicitor Arch Ferrell, chief prosecution officer for Russell County, said he will demand the death penalty for "who ever is found guilty." Alabama law provides the extreme punishment for setting off an explosion "in, under or dangerously near" an occupied dwelling.

Bentley himself blamed the attack on gambling and his efforts to stamp it out, but he made no accusations against any one group or individual, he said simply that "if it hadn't been for the bug racket lottery there would have been no bombing."

Bentley told a meeting of about 30 persons in the Russell County Courthouse here last night of a whispering campaign directed against him since the bombing.

"The latest rumor is that Hugh Bentley blew up his family because he is just that anxious to clean up the town," he related.

He added that he felt no malice against the perpetrator of the crime.

City, county, state and federal investigators so far have found no trace of the explosives planted under the front porch of the Bentley's lakeside home. Bit by bit they combed through the debris yesterday without success. Army demolition experts from nearby Fort Benning, just across the Chattahoochee River.

Ship Abandoned in North Pacific on Wednesday

Seattle Jan. 11 (AP)—A widening sea-air search for the freighter Pennsylvania and the 45 men who abandoned her wallowing hulk Wednesday was underway today over a large North Pacific area.

Three ships continued to comb the area and seven airplanes were alerted to participate in the second day of searching the windy swirling ocean spot where the men last were heard from.

Canadian and U. S. ships and planes yesterday conducted a days-long, crisscross search of the region 465 miles northwest of Vancouver Island where the broken and water-logged freighter last reported being in difficulty.

"They found nothing—not even a scrap of wreckage, a drifting bit of clothing or a life preserver. Just wind and waves and snow flurries."

"The surface search for the four lifeboats from the Pennsylvania kept up all night as ships crews maintained a ceaseless vigil, searching the wild swells with the aid of lights and flares. Airplanes were forced to return to their bases at nightfall."

Comdr. R. W. Dudley, chief pilot of a Coast Guard flying boat, returned to Seattle and reported simply:

"We didn't see a thing, not a trace."

He said a storm was still raging and surface swells were so great his plane would have been torn to pieces had it been forced to sit down.

The flyers said they felt little hope that the 7,800-ton victory ship was still afloat.

"You can't imagine the size of those waves," one coast guardman said. "An abandoned ship would have a slim chance in that."

But the search continued today. Coast Guard officials mapped an area of thousands of square miles and hoped to scan it all before darkness sets in. They allow for a wide margin of error however, in search effectiveness because of the low visibility.

Wave heights an estimated 60 feet deep were reported by the flyers and numerous snow squalls sometimes reduced visibility to virtually nothing.

"Unfortunately," a headquarters spokesman said, "you could fly right by drifting life boats or even a freighter under those conditions and not see them."

Nothing further was heard of yesterday's lone slim clue radar "blip" on the screen of the liberty ship Gygenet III. That unidentified object was estimated to be 16 miles away from the Gygenet III at midday. Apparently nothing was found as it was not mentioned again.

Two other steamers in the area, the Japanese Kamakura Maru and Canadian Stonetown, likewise had little to report.

The Stonetown reported containing heavy seas and 40-mile waves at 5:00 p. m. Pacific Standard Time (8:0 p.m. EST), last night.

The wide-scale hunt will continue. Coast Guard officials said, until the men are found or no further hope can be held that they are saved.

Mobster Is Acquitted of Charge

Washington Jan. 11 (AP)—The Senate, which wanted to put him in prison, has lost to a mobster (Greasy Thumb) Guzik, who didn't want to go.

"Greasy Thumb," veteran Chicago mobster, was acquitted by U. S. District Judge Edward A. Tamm yesterday of charges growing out of his refusal to answer questions of the Senate crime investigating committee.

Guzik's attitude distressed the committee. It recommended he be held for contempt of Congress. The Senate went along with the recommendation. So did a federal grand jury, which returned a 5-count indictment.

But Judge Tamm, high official of the FBI before he went on the bench, ruled after listening to day-long arguments Guzik was within his legal rights.

He reached his conclusion "with some difficulty," the judge said, adding: "But the court feels we are committed to a government of laws, not of men."

He said a witness may refuse to answer if it may reasonably have a tendency to incriminate him. That cleared Guzik.

The legal issue which prosecutors and defense attorneys argued about for hours was whether Guzik was justified under the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions specified in the indictment.

After the judge's ruling, Assistant U. S. Attorney Charles H. Murray, who prosecuted the case, indicated he may drop a similar indictment against Rocco Fischetti. Like Guzik's, Fischetti's name long has been linked with organized crime in the Chicago area, dating back to the days of Al Capone.

Murray said he will go over the Fischetti case again and tell Judge Tamm Monday whether he will go ahead with the prosecution or drop it.

Guzik's acquittal added to a long list of setbacks suffered by Congress in its efforts to punish witnesses who refuse to answer questions of its committee on the ground of possible self-incrimination.

Testimony Ends in Milk Price Trial

St. Smith Jan. 11 (AP)—Testimony has been completed on a request that the federal government set minimum milk prices in this area.

The case now goes to the U. S. Department of Agriculture for consideration. If the department rules for fixing prices, farmers in this area will vote on the issue.

Milk distributors have opposed the request.

Dr. W. L. Keith, manager of the Northwest Arkansas Dairy Farmers' Association, has requested that Fayetteville be included in the area affected. He previously asked that Washington and Benton Counties be added to the area but amended his request to include only Fayetteville.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

CARL went on with his discussion with Don.

"There are few enough teachers—not only in my system but everywhere—who do not make of their work a dull, tedious, and routine business. You seem to be in a happy, instead, to make it, shall I say, manfully. Your approach is both practical and moral. It is spiritual, too, for you teach as though you believed in the underlying nobility of your students."

"I'm not at all sure I deserve all that."

"You do deserve it, even though you are impetuous and aggressive. Sometimes too much so." He let his chair down, folded his hands on his desk, and stared at them thoughtfully.

"We teach our youth, but we do not teach them enough. We do not teach them how to develop their powers, how to evaluate them, or how to regard them once they are evaluated. This you are endeavoring to do. And, I might add, you are succeeding greatly."

He lifted his head and his glasses shone upon Don. "Under your boys and girls are learning what it means to become citizens of a republic of men, of human understanding. I am very conscious of that. I am conscious, too, that you seem to know the art of teaching independent discovery to little place because you encourage the curiosity of thought beyond the prescribed curriculum. You—"

He smiled a faint, happy smile—"for these commendable habits and skills you have often been commended."

"I know."

Carl looked at his hands again. "Your year here is half up. Within the next two months—before Easter—you and all the others here on my staff will or will not receive contracts inviting you to return. But prior to that, early in April, the School Board is scheduled to meet with me to decide who among you shall be given contract renewals. I wanted to warn you that there will be opposition to your name."

"I'm sure of it."

There was a short pause. Then Carl continued slowly, weighing each word and listening to it carefully as if a stranger were speaking. "I wanted to tell you that I am so thoroughly pleased with your work that I shall do everything in my power to see that you do not lose you."

"Thank you, Mr. Strong."

Carl nodded. Still gazing at his hands, he seemed not to have finished.

Donald said, "Is there anything I can do to help in this fight? For I'm afraid it will be that."

"Yes, it will be that," he hesitated. "You could completely change your way of teaching," he said dryly. "You could become the accepted harmless stereotyped instructor blind to your human opportunities and lecturing only out of the book—that is," he corrected himself, "you could try to become that. But even if you succeeded, you would, I fear, not be wanted here."

"Why has Mr. Melick become your personal number one enemy? Do you know?"

"The thrust of the question started Donald. He had not been aware until this moment that Melick was his number one enemy."

He said, half smiling, "I thought Ned Peabody was."

"He was," Carl shook his head, and his face for a moment registered a tired scorn. "He still bears you no love. With him it is the salary business about which I can do nothing. The town must increase its taxes to even up that situation, and I doubt very much if it will. Not this year. But it's Melick who is most"—he searched for a word—"venomous against you."

"I don't know."

"Melick," Carl said thoughtfully, "is a more dangerous man than Peabody. He has somehow built himself a following within the past few months. Perhaps all these people who are now clamoring for your scalp were just waiting for a leader. Something Peabody could never be. I don't know. Anyway, Melick has come forward in that capacity. And he is the president of the School Board this year. It's very unfortunate."

Donald said nothing. But a light had suddenly flashed in his mind. Anne! Anne was giving her time and attention to him now, rather than to Joe. The change in their relationship to something more delicate and promising than mere friendly companionship dated from the night when Don had been recommended to leave the Country Club. Melick's part in that episode had been a silent one. He had seemed a mere onlooker. Yet now Donald wondered if he had not been more. Hadn't he, perhaps, instigated the entire incident at Joe's suggestion or request, because Joe acknowledged Don as his rival and feared him?

Surely if he, Don, had been jealous of Joe—and he had—Joe might have felt an equal jealousy of him.

And if this was so, if the Melick had indeed been at the bottom of that business, then (since Don's ejection had not resulted as Joe had hoped and planned, for Anne had followed him home, and the Twings and the Strongs, hearing of the action later, had registered vehement protest against the group that had taken it) now might it not be that Melick was determined to avenge Joe for Anne's overthrow of him?

Or somehow prove himself finally right in the eyes of his fellow club members for his estimate of the new teacher? (Refusing the contract would accomplish that.) Or both? And of course he had picked up a following!

All this came to him in some confusion, as a new and startling idea which would bear further thought and investigation. Right now, even if it were true, he could not say so. He could not drag Anne into it.

"The quarrel over you," Carl went on, his mild voice troubled, "is gathering momentum to a considerable degree. It is not just because of your ways of teaching. You seem to have acquired, since that unfortunate night at the Country Club—indeed, before that, in all honesty—a well—a social approach."

Donald nodded.

With apparent difficulty and unwillingness, Carl finished. "You—and your sister and her husband. All of you. Your ways of living are not wholly approved by those who set themselves up as your critics. It is extremely distressing. Extremely. I am speaking to you very frankly, but the situation is serious. People are definitely for or against you. You can see it in our church, which has divided into two camps."

Donald said quickly, "Oh, that mustn't happen!"

"But it has happened," he paused. "And those who do not care for you do not like it that their minister does."

Donald looked stricken. He said grimly, "I guess I had better get out then. Right away. Before I do any more harm."

"No!" The sharpness with which Carl spoke jerked Don back to him. Carl was leaning toward him, his brown eyes revealing an unexpected and unusual fire. "That is paramount to an admission that they are right and we are wrong. You as a teacher and as an administrator. And I do not admit that. It is against my principles. I am upholding you because I believe in you and your methods. The objection to you, in so far as I can gather, is based on some small personal bias or jealousy, and I will have nothing to do with it. I will not recognize it. I want you to stay, and I mean to fight to have you stay. I am sure Dr. Atwood would be the first one to agree that we are right."

It was true. In spite of his deep concern over the rift in his church—something he abhorred—he would feel that way. Donald knew it.

He said slowly, "So what do we do? Wait, and let things take their course?"

"No!" Carl said again, and added unequivocally, "We try to shape their course according to our best beliefs and win. We consider the best interests of the town."

Donald shook his head. "I don't know. I'd like to think about it."

Carl nodded. "But, after all," he said, "it really rests with me. And I have made my decision."

All the way home Donald's thoughts were in turmoil.

He thought of Anne. How could he, now, ask her to marry him? She had reservations about joining her life to that of an educator, anyway. He knew that. But for the first time it came to him quite clearly all the reasons why. It was not only the restrictions of personal liberty that she resented. The having to join this, attend that, appear here, serve there. Nor was it only the small compensation received which compared so unfavorably with the length of preparation required, the responsibilities he carried, and the extracurricular demands made upon you. Nor the indifference to your social contacts outside of the school—where but Anne had offered to introduce him to anyone? It was also this business of being watched, this over-imminent suggestion to a barrage of criticism, just or unjust. It was the glare of publicity in which you lived. And the standards of professional conduct you must accept from people without qualifications to judge what they should be. The knocking under to these demands—or the battle. If you knuckled under you were lost. You became a mere pawn. If you battled—well, if you battled you were lost, too.

"Wait till you have been a teacher awhile," Anne had said. "You'll find out." He had found out, all right.

Birth Records Incomplete

Little Rock Jan. 11 (AP)—The Federal Security Agency said yesterday the Arkansas birth registration records are nearly 12 per cent incomplete.

The FSA compared Arkansas 1950 birth records with Census Bureau records and found the state's tolls only 88.1 per cent complete.

Don Stephens, head of the Arkansas Health Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics, said the survey indicated that only 97.2 per cent of Arkansas' hospital births are reported; 78 per cent of births out of hospitals attended by physicians, and 71.9 percent of the other births are registered.

State GOPs to Study Primary

Little Rock Jan. 11 (AP)—Arkansas Republican leaders met here today to consider a proposed GOP presidential primary.

Oscar Cobb, chairman of the state GOP Executive Committee, said party leaders hope to trim the cost of the primary to about $25,000. Cobb has estimated a primary would cost $75,000. If the cost can be reduced "we may have a primary," said Cobb.

Ex Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, a candidate for the republican presidential nomination, has requested a GOP preferential primary in Arkansas. He offered to share the cost.

Chancellor May Seek Governorship

Little Rock, Jan. 11 (AP)—Chancellor Francis Cherry of Jonesboro said here last night he has about decided to run for governor of Arkansas.

"I'm fed up with the situation as it exists in the state at present," the 42-year-old judge said in an interview.

Cherry's remarks came after a resolution was drafted Wednesday night by a group of Jonesboro citizens urging him to seek the Democratic nomination for governor.

And, Herbert H. McAdams, Jonesboro attorney and close friend of the judge, predicted "that if the present trend toward Judge Cherry continues, he will quite likely become a candidate."

New Union Oil Discovery

El Dorado, Jan. 11 (AP)—A new deep oil pool discovery may be in prospect for Union county. This was indicated yesterday after drillstem tests were made of a wildcat well about 100 miles northwest of here.

The wildcat is the Reynolds Gammon Lumber Co. No. 1 S. N. V. 30148-17. It is about halfway between the Libson and Bear Creek fields.

A company spokesman said Reynolds-Gammon owned only surface rights on the tract.

The well was drilled by Martin Hunderlich. A drillstem test from 6,423 to 6,425 feet yielded 226 feet of oil and no water. Gas came to the surface in five minutes. The 30-mile test was made on a 14 inch surface pressure registered 1,200 pounds. Bottomhole flowing pressure was 2,550 pounds. Shut-in pressure was 1,675 pounds.

In a second drillstem test made from 6,424 to 6,427 feet, recovery was 520 feet of oil and 200 feet of water.

Baltimore Transit Strike Continues

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Continuation of a transit strike into next week was predicted today, but the nation's sixth largest city experienced little of the paralysis expected from the walkout of 3,200 transit workers.

Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin, after separate meetings with company and union officials, issued a statement in which he said:

"We do not look for a settlement during the present week end."

All street cars, trackless trolleys and buses stopped running at 4 a. m. Thursday when members of the AFL Transit Workers' Union walked out in demand of a 2-cent hourly increase.

Despite the completeness of the strike, the paralysis that many had feared failed to set in.

Thousands of automobiles normally left at home crowded into the downtown area, slowing traffic considerably, but no prolonged jam was reported, even during the rush hours.

Company car pools, private bus service by some firms, drivers' consideration for hitchhikers and old fashioned leg power carried practically all workers to and from their jobs.

Absenteeism was slight and there was no mass of late arrivals to work yesterday morning.

Taxicab companies, expecting a flood of business from the $75,000 odd daily riders of the transit system, reported their fares only normal. Persons standing on street corners were offered rides without even asking, and the raising of a thumb brought hitchhikers immediately lifts.

Meanwhile, Gov. McKeldin asked leaders of the transit union and officials of the Baltimore Transit Company to separate meetings. A federal mediator tried to get the parties together without luck and said he would try again today.

Bodies of 1800 Unknown Soldiers Found

Tokyo, Jan. 11 (AP) — Korean battlefield have given up bodies of 1,800 American "unknown" soldiers.

Today they lie in Army mausoleums on Kyushu, Southern Japanese island.

Each day a few are identified — from birthmarks, tattoos, finger prints, dental work, old fractures.

Some of the unidentified dead are carried on way lists as missing. The Defense Department has listed about 11,000 missing in the Korean war. The Communists have listed 3,198 Americans as prisoners. They said 570 other Americans died after capture.

Others may be listed as killed in action. The military accepts the word of two or more witnesses as verification of death even though the body may not be recovered immediately.

At Camp Kokura on Kyushu, the most modern scientific detection methods are used to link each body with a name.

The bodies of all Americans killed in battle — not just the unknowns — are sent from Korea to Camp Kokura for recheck and positive identification before they are returned to the United States for burial.

The "unknowns" remain at Kokura.

The identification effort embraces the work of chemists, X-ray technicians, fingerprint experts, anthropologists and clerks.

The process is so thorough that a serviceman's "dog tag" is not accepted as conclusive proof except where the body is recovered immediately and unit officers swear to identification.

Benachamp said 800 bodies received at Camp Kokura as "unknowns" have been identified.

Experts forward fingerprints to the FBI for check against the prints on record of every service man.

The height, weight, age, race, color and other physical characteristics are recorded to the extent possible.

Clothing is checked by chemists for laundry marks.

Experts study personal effects such as papers, photographs and jewelry.

Meanwhile in Korea, graves registration teams carry on a continuous search for the dead.

Sometimes they work so close to the battle front that they too, have to fight.

'Two Tickets to Broadway,' Gay and Colorful Musical, Opens 2-Day Run at Saenger Sunday

The romance of a pair of young people trying to get a start in show business motivates the gay plot of Howard Hughes' presentation, "Two Tickets to Broadway," lavish musical in color by Technicolor.

Tony Martin and Janet Leigh head the stellar cast of the film, which also includes Gloria De Haven, Eddie Bracken, Ann Miller and Barbara Lawrence. Martin and the four girls all portray youngsters with theatrical ambitions, and Bracken is cast as a booking-agent whose erratic schemes to encourage those ambitions make for plenty of hilarious happenings.

Bob Crosby and his band, The Charvels, the vaudeville duo of Smith and Dale, Taylor Holmes and Buddy Baer are featured in the musical RKO Radio offering, which James V. Kern directed. The sparkling dance numbers were directed by Busby Berkeley, with most of the catchy songs composed by Jule Styne and Leo Robin.

Says He Played Along to Expose Briber

Shreveport, La., Jan. 11 (AP) — A suspended U.S. Attorney charged with asking a bribe says he carried on bribery talks with a Texas oil man only to find out if the Federal Petroleum Board was involved in an alleged $60,000 deal.

Harvey L. Carey, testifying at his Federal Court trial yesterday, denied he ever had any intention of accepting $60,000 from the Texan, Lewis Hart.

The trial was recessed until 11 a. m. (EST) Monday because Defense Attorney Whitfield Jack must go to Washington.

Carey was indicted on a charge of asking a $60,000 bribe from Hart to squish perjury charges against Hart and four employees. The charges stemmed from testimony that Hart and his employees gave the Federal Petroleum Board about transporting illegally-produced oil in interstate commerce.

The suspended attorney quoted Hart as saying the oil board was not interested in prosecuting him (Hart) on the perjury charges after he pleaded guilty to transporting illegally produced oil and was fined $12,000.

Carey testified that the federal oil group "hadn't told me they were not interested in prosecuting the perjury case against Hart."

As U. S. attorney, the perjury case came under Carey's jurisdiction. Earlier in the trial, James Lewis, chairman of the Federal Petroleum Board, testified that Hart came to him and said Carey was willing to "settle" the perjury charges for "a $60,000 campaign contribution."

Carey, however, said that it was Hart who made the offer of $60,000 for a campaign contribution to settle the perjury charges.

He said Hart told him he "would rather make a campaign contribution than face further persecution and publicity."

"My first impulse," Carey told the jury, "was to throw him out the door."

He said he restrained his anger and decided to carry on the bribe talks "because I wanted to find out definitely what Hart meant. He had never made a concrete offer to make the bribe and I wanted him to make the bribe."

Secretary of Interior Chapman signs the contracts.

McClellan, who talked with Chapman yesterday, said Reynolds, Arkansas Power & Light Co., and Southwestern Power Administration have reached an agreement on supplying power for the plant.

The Defense Materials Procurement Agency last fall authorized Reynolds Metals to expand its aluminum production 60,000 tons annually.

Reynolds officials said the proposed plant would be located in Arkansas where the company has an alumina plant at Bauxite and an aluminum reduction plant at Hurricane Creek.

Location of the new plant has not been announced.

McClellan Sees New Plant Soon

Washington (AP) — Sen. McClellan (Ark.) thinks arrangements will be completed soon for Reynolds Metals Co. to proceed with plans for constructing an aluminum production plant in Arkansas.

McClellan said last night that construction can begin as soon as

Suspense Drama, 'He Ran All the Way,' Opens Sunday at Rialto Theatre

JOHN GARFIELD and SHIRLEY WINTERS in a dramatic love scene from "HE RAN ALL THE WAY," released by United Artists.

"He Ran All the Way," The John Garfield-Shirley Winters starring vehicle, is nature in the raw. The vehicle, in the longest sustained terror-Bob Roberts production which opens on Sunday at the Rialto Theatre through United Artists release, features violent emotion from the opening sequence.

Torrid love scenes between Garfield and Miss Winters are among the highlights of the film. In one scene, Garfield, wearing a black and blue on her arms and shoulders.

In other hectic scenes, Garfield smashes his hand through a plate glass window, watches his friend shot and she herself, Wallace Ford, kiss over put on film. Centers out preview critic called "He Ran All the Way" a breathless experience from beginning to end.

DOROTHY DIX

Bad Family Background

Dear Miss Dix: A young girl lives in our town. Her father is a habitual drunkard and thief, lazy and mean to his family. His wife has the reputation of being a good person, but his sons have very bad records. It is the daughter of the family, however, with whom I am primarily concerned. She goes to school with my children and most of the other youngsters at school won't associate with her. She tries to be friendly but gets a very cold reception. Do you think if my girls were to become friendly with her, it would give her a lift along life's way? I don't want my children to become snobs, yet I don't want them looked down upon. The Bible says "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." I'm sure this girl doesn't like being left out of things. She has clean clothes but doesn't know how to "fix up." These are the things that I think a friendly school chum could help out with.

I am truly concerned about this girl and would like to extend whatever help I or my daughters could to help her overcome an unfortunate family background.

MRS. IDA K.

Answer: What a warm, friendly world we'd live in if everyone looked as much interest in the less fortunate as you do, Ida! May your humanity always meet the right response.

The rehabilitation of a girl with a background as drab as this is not a job for one person. To accomplish your purpose, you should enlist the aid of other mothers and schoolgirls. You'll meet opposition — plenty of it — but if you can find some one who will cooperate it may be the means of building a fine character and creating an admirable woman from material that could just as easily become a hopeless wretched creature.

Since the girl's mother is a good person, she has a 50 per cent heritage of stability behind her, and probably only needs a helping hand to overcome the undesirable half.

Enlist Others

Why not talk to the parents of other girls in the class, tell them how you feel and what you'd like to accomplish? Suggest that they encourage their daughters to be friendly with the less fortunate youngster, perhaps sharing their lunch with her, especially if there is a possibility that she needs food. They could plan their own conversation around the things that would help her — for instance, comparing notes on grooming, skin care, hair setting, and the like. A girl anxious to improve herself will take in and apply every suggestion they make.

Invite her into your own home, by careful observation you can judge her character, and with a more complete picture, in mind, other means of assistance will be suggested to you.

If it becomes apparent that she will not profit by your good will, drop the whole thing. I think such an eventually, however, most unlikely. Practically every young girl is keen for the possibility of self-improvement, and will deeply appreciate a lift. Give your assistance in a kindly, not condescending, manner. You will be amply blessed for your compassion.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a young bride expecting a baby this winter. My husband and I are very happy, so my problem does not concern my marriage. I have a young brother, 11 years old, who will have lunch with me every day this winter. He is bright and curious. I have told him of the coming event. How can I explain to him what is happening? He is too old to believe in the story, and too young to be told the facts of life.

Answer: You are laboring under a grave misapprehension if you consider your brother too young to know the "facts of life." An 11-year-old in this so-called enlightened age probably already knows much more than you think. Your concern for him is admirable, and you are very right in telling him know of the baby. Be alert to answer any questions that may come up, or to take advantage of an opportunity to discover for yourself just how far little brother's knowledge goes and to supplement it with your own information.

Dear Miss Dix: Why do middle-class men in their conscious and subconscious minds resent the fact that their wives are no longer young and attractive? Why do they demand and expect youth and beauty when they themselves are far from young and handsome?

Answer: Your premise, as I think, quite wrong. Most men accept rather gracefully the fact that their wives are aging in accord with the dictates of nature. Worried, of course, are no longer bound to become unattractive simply because they reach middle age, but even if they do slip in looks, hubby seems content. Dissatisfied men would probably be discontented with any wife!

This Church Page Is Published Weekly With the Hope that More People Will Go to Church.

HAVE you ever stood in the pulpit and looked at yourself, through the eyes of the congregation? Do you know the value and appreciate the service of your pastor? He is spokesman for God and for right and for truth. He is God's servant and your leader.

IN THE LONG AGO the Master said to a company of very ordinary people, "You will be my witnesses." What if Peter, James and John and the rest had failed Him? The "priesthood of believers" is a doctrine of personal responsibility on the part of lay women and lay men. It depends on you. Do you fill "your place" in the pew.

You and I make up the church in its human character. We have a responsibility... a place to fill. In prayer and meditation we can 'tune in' on heavenly things. We can make our contribution to the ongoing of the Christian movement. Let us fill 'our place in the pew' as faithfully as our minister fills his place in the pulpit.

You In The Church...
The Church In You
Form a combination for good. We should attend church regularly. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the CHURCH. Be faithful. Be a Churchman!
